I do not schedule playing times for each match. In the past we had quite a few forfeits, and many players sitting around waiting for their opponent to show up.

I have the players show up at 6 pm, and assign matches using a round robin schedule, on a first come, first served basis. In this manner, no one sits around waiting for their opponent to show up and play. It's like a small tournament on league nights.

I do not like forfeits. If any player misses three weeks, he is automatically moved out of the league. It works for me.

I realize it is time consuming, but I love to mingle with the players, help them with their games, and make it a fun time.

When they finish playing singles, we then start playing some doubles, until closing time.

It's fun, and the players love it.
